Product Description

Retinoic Acid CAS 302-79-4

Description

Tretinoin, another name for retinoic acid, is a member of the retinoid family and a derivative of vitamin A. It is highly prized for its powerful skin-benefiting properties and is frequently used in skincare and dermatology.

The anti-aging benefits of Retinoic Acid are well-known when it comes to cosmetic compositions. It aids in the synthesis of collagen, accelerates the turnover of skin cells, and facilitates the healing of damaged skin. Better skin texture, less wrinkles, and more even skin tone are the outcomes of this.

Retinoic Acid is also helpful for people with acne-prone skin because it helps reduce excessive oil production and treat acne.

Application

Anti-age Skincare: Retinoic Acid is frequently used in over-the-counter and prescription skincare formulations to improve skin firmness, minimize the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles, and fight the indications of age.

Acne Treatments: To clear pores, lessen acne breakouts, and enhance general skin condition, the chemical is added to acne treatments including lotions and gels.

Dermatological Products: Retinoic Acid is present in a number of dermatological products that are intended to treat skin disorders such as psoriasis, melasma, and hyperpigmentation.
