Product Description

Glutathione CAS 70-18-8

Description

Three amino acids make up the tripeptide glutathione: glutamic acid, cysteine, and glycine. It is one of the most significant endogenous antioxidants in the body and is essential for preserving cellular integrity and shielding cells from oxidative damage.

Due to its antioxidant qualities, glutathione is a useful substance for many cosmetic and health-related uses. It aids in the elimination of free radicals, dangerous substances that can destroy cells and hasten the onset of illness and aging.

Glutathione is also well-known for its possible contributions to skin-lightening and brightening effects. It is a sought-after component in skincare products meant to address hyperpigmentation and uneven skin tone since it is thought to prevent the synthesis of melanin, the pigment that gives skin its color.

Application

1. Supplements for Antioxidants: Glutathione is included in dietary supplements that improve antioxidant function and enhance general health and wellbeing.
2. Skin Lightening Products: To address hyperpigmentation and encourage a more even skin tone, glutathione is frequently added to skincare formulas, including soaps, lotions, and serums.
3. Support for Detoxification: Glutathione is utilized in health goods and supplements that assist the body's natural detoxification processes because of its function in cellular detoxification.
