Description:

We are a leading supplier of high-quality chemical raw materials, specializing in the distribution of nuciferine. Our company is committed to providing reliable, pure nuciferine, a natural compound derived from the sacred lotus (Nelumbo nucifera) plant. With its unique properties and diverse applications, nuciferine (CAS 475-83-2) is a valuable ingredient in the pharmaceutical, nutraceutical and research industries.

Nuciferine is a bioactive alkaloid found in all parts of the sacred lotus plant, including leaves, seeds, and flowers. The following are the main properties and applications of nuciferine:

Pharmaceutical Applications: Nuciferine has gained widespread attention in the pharmaceutical industry for its potential health benefits. It has a range of pharmacological activities, including antioxidant, anti-inflammatory and anti-cancer properties. Nuciferine is being studied for its potential role in various therapeutic applications including cardiovascular health, neuroprotection, and metabolic disorders.

Nutraceuticals and dietary supplements: Nuciferine is used as an ingredient in nutraceuticals and dietary supplements. It's often included in formulas designed to support weight management, improve mood, and overall health. Nuciferine's potential effects on metabolism and mood regulation make it an attractive ingredient in these products.

Research and Development: Nuciferine is the subject of ongoing research in various scientific fields. Its unique chemical structure and biological activity make it an interesting compound to study in drug discovery, natural product chemistry, and medicinal plant research. Researchers rely on the purity and availability of nuciferine to study its mechanism of action and potential applications.

Traditional Medicine: The sacred lotus plant has a long history of traditional use in Eastern medicine. Nuciferine, a component of the plant, is included in traditional herbal medicine for its potential health benefits. It is believed to have calming and relaxing properties, making it a popular natural ingredient in traditional medical practices.

Application:

CAS number 475-83-2 corresponds to the compound nuciferine. Nuciferine is an alkaloid found in a variety of plants, particularly in the lotus plant (Nelumbo nucifera). Here are some of its potential applications:

- 1. Traditional Medicine: Nuciferine has a long history of use in traditional systems of medicine, particularly in Ayurveda and Traditional Chinese Medicine. It is believed to have a variety of medicinal properties, including antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, analgesic, and antimicrobial effects. It has been used to treat conditions such as insomnia, gastrointestinal disorders, fever, and coughs. However, further research is needed to validate these traditional uses and explore its potential therapeutic applications.
- 2. Weight management: Nuciferine has received attention for its potential role in weight management. It is thought to have anti-obesity effects by affecting various metabolic processes. Nuciferine may help reduce food intake, inhibit fat accumulation, and enhance fat metabolism. However, more scientific research is needed to fully understand its mechanism of action and efficacy.
- 3. Nerve health: Emerging research suggests nuciferine may have neuroprotective properties. It has been found to have antioxidant and anti-inflammatory effects in the brain, which may help prevent neurodegenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease. Additionally, nuciferine may have mood-enhancing properties and potential antidepressant effects.
- 4. Cardiovascular health: Some studies suggest nuciferine may have cardiovascular benefits. It has been found to have hypotensive (lowering blood pressure) properties and may help improve blood lipid profiles by lowering cholesterol and triglyceride levels. However, more research is needed to determine its effectiveness and safety for cardiovascular health.
